

ETHICS IN ANCIENT INDIAN EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM – A STUDY

S. R. SARANYA KUMAR

Associate Professor, Department of History, Rashtriya Sanskrit Vidyapeetha, Deemed University,
Tirupati, Andhra Pradesh, India

ABSTRACT

The Brahmanical system of education is mainly a domestic system of education. A student undergoes very rigid physical, mental and moral discipline. It aims to convert the student into a ‘full human being’ and train him efficiently to shoulder the responsibilities of the society. The Buddhist education concentrates, more, on spiritual training. It is mainly a monastic system of education. It is binding on the pupil to become monks after completing education. But, both the systems moulded the moral and spiritual personality of the students not only by teaching moral ethics but also trains them to practice those ethics.

KEYWORDS: Bramhachari, Education, Ethics, Moral Training, Moral Ethics, Teacher, Monk